

KEMPF TO PAY OUT OF POCKET

Attorney General Sturdevant Thinks State Treasurer Must Pay Half For Bond.

IS STILL A DEBATABLE QUESTION

Would Mean Heavy Loss To The State Treasurer If It Was So Decided When Brought Into The Courts.

(By Staff Correspondent.)
Madison, Feb. 4.—Unless the legislature takes action otherwise, State Treasurer John J. Kempf will have to pay half of the cost of his surety bond out of his own pocket. Attorney General Sturdevant has rendered an official opinion in response to an inquiry made by the secretary of state declaring that according to the law the secretary cannot audit the bill for the bond premium for the whole amount of $1,500, but can audit it for half that sum, or $750. The reason given for this by the attorney general is that the statute governing the case limits to one-eighth of one per cent of the amount of the bond the sum which the state or any county, city or village can pay for the bond of an officer.

The bill was presented by Hackett & Goff of Milwaukee, agents for the United States Fidelity & Guarantee Co., of Baltimore, the amount of the premium being $1,500. The bill referred to chapter 101, of the laws of 1903, as the statute under which the bill should be audited and paid. The attorney general says in his opinion that after chapter 101 was passed two years ago, it was claimed that it did not provide for payment of the premium on the bond of Treasurer Kempf, because he had been elected before the law was enacted. Accordingly another law was passed to make this sure, chapter 279, making a specific appropriation to cover the case of Mr. Kempf. Subsequently a third law was passed on this subject during the same session of the legislature, being chapter 436 of the laws of 1903, providing that the cost or premium on a bond of an official, furnished by him through a proper bonding company, might be paid by the state, city, county, village or town, up to the limit of one-eighth per cent of the amount of the bond. The same chapter provides also, in its second section, that "all acts or parts of acts in conflict with this act are hereby repealed." Attorney General Sturdevant holds that the last enactment, being a general enactment, repeals all other acts in conflict with it, including that providing that the state shall pay the premium on the bond of the state treasurer and fixing the limit at one-fourth of one per cent. The bond of Treasurer Kempf was for $600,000 and the rate of premium charged is one-fourth of one per cent, amounting to $1,500 a year. The opinion of the attorney general cuts the bill of the agents of the bonding company in two. Secretary of State Houser has followed the opinion of the attorney general and has audited the bill for $750. It is presumed that Treasurer Kempf will pay the remainder out of his own salary or that the legislature will be called upon to pass a specific appropriation for the amount.

The opinion of the attorney general goes into the question fully and after setting forth the several statutes to be interpreted describes the situation in effect as follows:

There were two laws on the subject passed at the session of the legislature of 1903. The first act in point provided for the payment by the state of the premium on the surety bond of the state treasurer, when furnished by him through a company authorized and legally licensed to do business in Wisconsin, and fixing the limit of the rate to be paid by the state at one-fourth of one per cent of the amount. This was chapter 101, a law relating specifically to the state treasurer. Subsequently a second and a general law was enacted, allowing the state, county, city, town or village, to pay the premium on the bond of any officer, and limiting the rate at one-eighth of one per cent. Part of the second law provided for the repeal of all laws or parts of laws in conflict with it. The attorney general cites authorities and concludes that the last act, being a general law, repeals the former, which was a specific enactment, because of the established principle of law that a subsequent general enactment repeals specific prior specific enactments, but a subsequent specific enactment cannot be construed as repealing a previous general enactment.

There are two things that Mr. Kempf may try to do if he find fault with the opinion of the attorney general and the action of the secretary of state. He may bring mandamus proceedings, disputing the conclusions of the attorney general and asking that the secretary of state be compelled to audit the entire bill; or he can attempt to have the legislature pass an appropriation for the amount refused payment.

TRADE AFFAIRS IN GOOD SHAPE

Heavy Demand From Consumers Keeps Men at Work In Big Factories.

THE RETAILERS ARE DOING WELL

Business Men In The Country District Are Compelled To Replenish Their Stocks In Order To Keep Trade.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—The weekly review of Chicago trade, published by R. C. Dun & Co., says:

"Aside from hindrances to transportation and delayed deliveries of commodities due to severe weather, business conditions maintained a satisfactory tone, new demands having progressed in both manufacturing and distributive branches. February dividend payments were of slightly reduced aggregate, but financial affairs generally are seen to be in good position, with bank exchanges measurably increased over those of a year ago.

"Railroad operation was difficult owing to intense cold and snowstorms in the West, and returns of earnings exhibit some decline, which probably will be temporary, arrangements now being under way assuring larger carrying.

"Marketing of grain has shown a shrinkage as compared with both last week and a year ago, and the shipments from this port are lower, corn in considerable quantity having been diverted through gulf outlets.

"Fuel in Ample Supply.

"Fuel and raw materials were in ample supply and enabled the factories to run without interruption. Price changes appeared in only a few lines, the most important being an advance in nails and other wire products. Wheat and sheep rose slightly in value, but other food stuffs made lower quotations in corn, oats, pork and cattle.

"Receipts of hides were 2,732,800 pounds, against 3,555,419 pounds for the corresponding week last year, and the market continued strong in both demand and cost. Leather buying showed urgency and tanners drew more largely upon capacity, demand upon them having gained. Shoe factory product is in good request and other leather consuming lines are fairly well engaged on current requirements.

Trade in Lumber.

"Receipts of lumber were 25,225,000 feet, against 12,230,000 feet a year ago. The general buying of all sorts of yard stocks shows headway, with the hard woods freely sought for furniture and other manufacturing purposes. Pig iron has held steady, though sales were smaller, but rails, wire and structural steel were quite active, the new commitments reaching a heavy tonnage.

"Retail trade, notwithstanding adverse elements, made a fair showing in the volume of dealings. Distributors of general merchandise report encouraging features. Mail advices from various interior points indicate that stocks have been selling well and much replenishing is going on and will continue should cold weather be prolonged.

Spring Orders Satisfactory.

"Orders for spring delivery have come forward satisfactorily and the house buying increased in dry goods, footwear, wearing apparel and furniture. Visiting merchants are planning confidently for larger sales during the coming months and mercantile collections are reasonably prompt.

"Bank clearings, $187,458,732, are 12.4 per cent over those a year ago. "Failures reported in Chicago district number twenty-nine, against twenty-four last week and twenty-seven a year ago."

HOME FOR AGED WOMEN AT BUFFALO IS BURNED

Inmate of Buffalo Institution, Once Saved From Fire, Returns to Building and Perishes.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 4.—Fire Friday night destroyed a part of the Ingleside Home for Aged Women. In a panic among the fifty inmates of the place, Mrs. Mary Kytile, 53 years old, was killed and four were hurt.

The fire was discovered while the women were preparing for supper. Most of them were on the second and third floors, and they became panic-stricken as the smoke rapidly filled the halls. Mrs. Kytile succeeded in getting out of the building, but returned.

Mrs. Margaret Greishaber also returned to the building upon learning that a friend could not be found among those outside. The firemen refused to allow her to enter the door, and she started to climb a fire escape. When she reached the windows on the second floor she lost her hold and fell to the ground. She was seriously injured.

A STUDY IN LIFE

Wisconsin's Brewer Lawmaker, Henry F. Hagemester.

(Special by Scripps-M'Kee.)

Madison, Wis., Feb. 4.—One of the most diligent and careful members of the Wisconsin legislature, as well as one having had the longest experience in the work of making laws, is Henry F. Hagemester of Green Bay, representing for the second term the second senatorial district. He is one of the most wealthy members of the legislature, being owner of a large brewery at Green Bay and having extensive interests in other similar plants. He is president of the Kellogg National bank of Green Bay and has the reputation of being a conservative and successful financier. His ability in this regard was shown in the last session, when, as chairman of the committee on claims, he gave general satisfaction for his economical management of the appropriation bills. Senator Hagemester is the heaviest man in the Wisconsin law-making body, weighing 282 pounds. In 1892 he was elected to the assembly as a democrat and reelected two years later, but became a republican upon the declaration of the national democratic party in favor of free silver. In 1900 he was elected to the senate as a republican and has served continuously since. He is one of the leading opponents of the faction of Governor La Follette, but in his opposition there is no exhibition of bitterness.

MILLIONAIRE ENDS LIFE IN PARK

Act Follows Physician's Statement That Patient Must Go to Asylum.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Millionaire John B. Scully, the iron manufacturer, stole away from his mansion to a remote corner of Humboldt park and shot himself.

He had just overheard the family physician and his wife agree that he would have to go to a private sanitarium because of his mental decline.

Brainy financier, experienced steel manufacturer, millionaire capitalist, prominent in the city's life, he had been suffering from increasing mental affliction for several months.

Dr. D. Birkhoff said that Mr. Scully already was practically insane, and would have to be watched until he could be sent to a private asylum.

Cunningly the millionaire then sneaked away from his residence at 1646 Jackson boulevard, rode quickly to Humboldt park and fired a bullet into his brain that brought quick death.

PLACARDS TO CHECK DISEASE

Milwaukee Health Department Will Mark Houses Consumptives Use.

Milwaukee, Feb. 4.—These apartments have been occupied by a consumptive and may have been infected. This is a conspicuous line in a placard which is to be posted on houses from which consumptives have removed if a certain bill prepared by the Milwaukee health department becomes a law. The bill is designed to enable the authorities to check the spread of tuberculosis. In addition to imposing the same regulations that now exist relative to smallpox, scarlet fever and diphtheria, it includes typhoid fever, whooping cough and tuberculosis. It is provided that all cases of tuberculosis shall be reported to the health department.

NOT SARCASTIC BUT THE TRUTH

OLD FOGY HAS WEEKLY LETTER ON CITY AFFAIRS.

LIGHTS AT THE POSTOFFICE

Government Seems To Be Too Poor
To Afford Proper Lighting of Their New Building.

To the Editor: At a recent meeting of the Men's League of the Methodist church the question of gambling was fully discussed by a prominent citizen. Places where gambling was known to exist openly were read and then the league proceeded to adopt the following resolution:

"Resolved, that we heartily commend Marshal Comstock for his efforts in suppressing vice and gambling in the city, and that we will give him, as citizens of Janesville, our support in endeavoring to suppress evil."

I would now like to call attention to what was done in Sheboygan regarding gambling by the church people and leave the public to judge which is the most effective way to deal with the gambling evil.

Church people at Sheboygan have informed Mayor Born that unless he closes all gambling places in the city at once they will have warrants issued themselves and have the town closed tight. As a result Mayor Born has ordered the police to close all gambling places.

New Theatre.

I also see by the papers that a new vaudeville theatre is to be started in the city. Now it would appear that there are certain laws regarding the theatres of the state, in fact of every place of amusement open to the public that are not laws lived up to. When the fire department destroyed hundreds of lives in Chicago a little over a year ago there was a hue and cry the country over regarding the safety of public buildings. The common council took immediate action, the chief of the fire department examined the buildings used for public halls about the city and made his report. It was a radical one in the extreme and the report if published as he found things to exist would have frightened the bravest. Little has been done to really remedy matters, a few fire escapes and other small precautions but essentially the same danger exists now as it did then. If we are to have a new theatre why not have it conform strictly with the letter of the law and then set an example which must be lived up to.

More Lights.

Has the government at Washington become so parsimonious that it can not afford to properly light their post office in this city or what is the trouble? Outside the structure stand two magnificent standards for electric lights. Evidently one is for ornament, the other for use, as but one is lighted and the other stands in its dark dignity like a sentinel on guard or the foolish virgin who forgot to fill her lamp. Inside conditions are not much better. Over each of the desks are two lights which evidently were placed there by the builders for use but which are never used. In fact until recently it has been rumored that the employees of the postoffice itself had no towels or other simple accommodations. Doubtless the postoffice is crippled by the recent law suits and searching investigations but it seems too bad Janesville is made to suffer when other post offices throughout the country are blessed with light. If the postmaster has not the power to order these lights lit he should take the matter up with Washington and see if the public cannot be better accommodated.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty. Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gasses and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines, and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables. Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the infectious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from the continued use of them, but one the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

brings back the former glories of Janesville with the fine blooded horses that made this city famous the country over in by gone days. If this interest in good horse flesh could be revived it would do much to advertise Janesville to the public at large. Get a town talked about, even if it is by an anti-kissing ordinance or a suicide club and people will investigate to see what sort of a city it is. When they investigate the natural charms and the manufacturing facilities will come out and factories will move here.

NEW BARGAIN DAY FOR THE BUYERS

Wednesday To Be the Time of Universal Offerings of Bargains Each Week.

A movement has been started to concentrate the efforts of the merchants in making Wednesday of each week a day of special bargains in Janesville. It will be a day of unusual offerings in all the principal stores of the city and the Gazette will co-operate with the merchants in the establishment and maintenance of this special Bargain Day.

Every Monday and Tuesday a list of the bargain articles offered will appear in the paper for the special Wednesday sales. The opportunity for saving on purchases of the articles offered by merchants on that day will be worthy of the buyers' careful attention and the announcements each week should be sought for. Janesville is an inviting place to the thousands of shoppers within easy access by interurban and steam railroads and as a trading center is famed throughout the entire southern portion of Wisconsin. It is not only the distributing point of Rock county but is the reason for all papers from all the adjacent territory with in easy reach of Janesville. The reason is obvious, here we have large, well arranged stores the equal of which are not found in cities of twice and even three times the size. In these days of "Frontier Finance" the search is for the original and the unique and the modern captains of industry are ever on the alert to improve conditions which will facilitate business transactions.

However prosperous the past year has been, it is really the beginning of an era of business activity. With the soil yielding rich harvests of easily marketed products and the manufacturing enterprises distributing goodly sums each week to wage earners, the commercial establishments of this city are receiving an impetus which assures a bright business year. The new Special Wednesday Bargain Day will work good to both merchants and buyers.

The Gazette has shared in the general prosperity of this community and has grown in two ways—first, in circulation, by which its favor with the public as a newspaper is measured; second, in volume of advertising patronage, by which its remunerative power as an advertising medium is measured. The Gazette continually reiterates the statement that the reader is not getting one-half the value of his newspaper unless he reads the advertising in its columns. You would not build a house without first asking for bids nor should you do your every day buying in comparative ignorance of the "bids" submitted by the various stores in the advertising columns. That this new feature will be popular is evidenced by the already large number of careful buyers who regularly consult the Gazette's advertising columns as a guide to their expenditures.

Keep your bargain eye open next Monday and Tuesday.

MAY NOT SURVIVE

NAP BY ROADSIDE

Alfred Bjerkie of Orfordville Had Both Feet and a Hand Frozen Wednesday Night.

Alfred Bjerkie of Orfordville, who has been employed at Fossum's farm on the Prairie road not far from Beloit, may not survive a little nap which he took by the roadside Wednesday night. With a companion by the name of Greg he drove during the day to Beloit with tobacco. After he had partaken freely of liquor the two men started home about dark. It was agreed that Bjerkie should follow Greg. The former had not proceeded far before he became very cold, and jumping to the ground began to run along behind his team. Suddenly he stumbled and fell and before he could get to his feet again the horses had put an eighth of a mile between the sleigh and its driver. In falling Bjerkie lost the glove from his left hand. After that he became very stiff and cold and lay down. An hour or so later while Greg was unhitching his horses in the barnyard, Bjerkie's team arrived on the scene without their teamster. Greg hastily put the horses in the barn, hitched a trosh horse to a cutter, and started back to hunt for the man. As the team had come in by the "creek" road, Greg followed that back to the city, but found no trace of the missing man. At one in the morning he was on the Prairie road. It was bitter cold and he aroused a couple of farmers and persuaded them to join him in the hunt. Some distance beyond the Strong farm they came upon Bjerkie's senseless form lying by the roadside. Both feet were frozen solid to the ankles and the left hand and right thumb were in a similar condition. He was carried to a house and his feet placed in a tub of snow and his hand in a bucket of it. The slow process of thawing was continued until noon, Thursday. In the afternoon he was taken to the hospital. It has not been learned as yet whether or not amputation will be necessary.

LOUIS COOK MUST BE TRIED AGAIN

Jury Split Even, Six For and Six Against Acquittal, After Being Out Nine Hours.

Louis Cook will have to stand trial once more on the criminal charge brought against him by W. J. Rodawalt, husband of Mrs. Ida Rodawalt of Allens Grove. The jury that went out at twelve o'clock yesterday split even—six for conviction and six for acquittal—during the first fifteen minutes of their consultation. After that they argued with one another for nine hours, but in the end the line-up stood just as it had in the beginning. At 5:15 last evening the foreman announced to the court that the twelve men selected to try the case had agreed to disagree. The jurors were: Jesse Cranfall, D. Drummond, Sam Tall, William Scofield, J. A. Sutherland, A. M. Glen, J. W. Scott, J. F. Spoon, J. C. Roelings, Oscar Brownell, C. F. Lester, and Henry Blunk. The new trial is set for next week. Wednesday but may possibly be postponed at that time.

Northwestern Road

On account of the unfavorable weather conditions there are many wrecks and derailments occurring at different points on all roads just at the present time. Last evening there were four wrecks on the Northwestern road which were known of in the local yards this morning. The Janesville wrecking outfit, in charge of George Rod and Hermann Shumacher was called out at midnight to go to Mendota where the track was blocked by a car with a broken journal. Before they could reach their destination they were ordered to Chequamegon, a car of coal having been wrecked at that place by a broken journal. At Medary, formerly called Winona Junction, the worst wreck of the four happened. An engine and eight cars went through the derail. Another wreck is reported to have occurred at Merrimac but little was known concerning this.

The company's ice house is now being filled and six cars of ice are being received from Crystal Lake daily. In order that all the work may be done by the regular employees of the company and to obviate the hiring of extra labor, Mr. Ellis is filling up an air hoist to lift the ice when it becomes impossible to "skate" it in from the cars. Formerly the method of drawing it in with a horse has been employed but if the air hoist is able to work rapidly enough this former method will be abandoned.

On account of the wreck at Chequamegon all Madison division trains came via Clinton Junction between midnight and 7:00 o'clock this morning.

Engineer I. W. Hagar and fireman Hay went to Fond du Lac on the 12:45 o'clock train this afternoon to work out of that place.

All freight brakemen have been warned by a bulletin to keep a sharp lookout for broken wheels and broken trucks during the cold weather, and while the roads are in their present condition, to avoid all accidents which might result from such disorder.

Conductor J. F. Whitney of the Madison division is off duty on account of an injury received January 26, when the caboose in which he was riding was derailed and rolled down the bank. Brakeman Frank Horton was also injured at the same time and will be off duty for a week or two.

Brakeman R. L. Harrington is off on account of sickness. Brakeman Howery is working in his place between Elroy and Janesville.

The continued cold weather has made the track rough in some places. In the deep cut between Allouan and North Freedom it is necessary for the trains to run at a slower speed on account of the rails being raised in places. It will be impossible to get the rails into their normal condition until the frost leaves the ground.

GROWING IN POPULARITY.

The More People Know Newbro's Herpicide the Better They Like it. The more it becomes known the better it is liked. One bottle kills two, and those two sell four. Newbro's Herpicide is what we are talking about. It cleans the scalp of all dandruff, and destroying the cause, a little germ or parasite, prevents the return of dandruff. As a hair dressing it is delightful. It ought to be found on every toilet table. It stops falling hair, and prevents baldness. It should be used occasionally, as a preventive to protect the scalp from a new invasion of the dandruff microbe. FEBRUARY COLD WAVE IS COMING

PREDICTIONS OF HICKS FOR THE PRESENT MONTH.

THUNDER AND RAIN POSSIBLE

Very Unsettled Conditions Will Exist
During Last Few Days of February.

Though the Reverend I. I. Hicks predicted falling barometer, rising temperature, shifting winds to the southward, and growing cloudiness, for the first storm period of February, they have not yet reached southern Wisconsin, which sections must be one of those which he said the conditions might be delayed in reaching. These conditions were to originate in the west and move eastward reaching the Atlantic about the 5th. These warmer days if they come will be followed by higher barometer, and cold clearing weather beginning in the west and reaching the east before the close of the period, Tuesday. The second period is reactionary, central on the 8th and 9th and due to the quickening and exciting of the Vulcan influence by the moon being on the celestial equator and in apogee. About the 8th there will be a reaction to warmer, with possible thunder showers and rain to southward turning to squalls of wind and snow in many sections on the 9th and 10th. High barometer and cold will immediately follow these storms.

February Cold Wave.

The moon at first quarter and the Vulcan equinox will be the disturbing factors between the 12th and the 16th and marked atmospheric depression, and along with a low barometer, prompt and vigorous storms may be expected with snow spreading eastward toward the close of the period. Before the anti-storm conditions disappear in the east a February cold wave will touch nearly all parts. The fourth storm period, reactionary to the conditions existing during the third will be central on the 15th, 20th and 21st. The earth's vernal equinox, the Vulcan reactionary and the moon at full, and in perigee on the celestial equator make up the perturbing influences. It is altogether probable that a series of light to moderate storms will make their first appearance in the waters adjacent to the Gulf regions at this time. Gales and violent light waves will reach many coasts exposed to storms of this nature in many parts of the earth. The barometer will fall and general rain and snow will visit the country within sixty hours of 6 o'clock in the evening of the 19th. A probable high gale and sweeping blizzard will come over and out of the northwest followed by a higher barometer and far reaching cold wave.

Unsettled Conditions.

The last period of the month extends from the 24th to the 28th and is central on the 26th. The equinoxes of the earth and Vulcan with the moon at last quarter and extreme declination south are the causes of disturbance. The weather at this time will be very unsettled and followed by cold weather from the west and north. The boreal, and equinoctial forces conflicting at the close of the month naturally produce weather irregularities. There will be constant shifts and squalls of snow and rain, increasing during the last four days. The barometer will fall and wide storm areas will make transit over the country on the last three days.

In Basket-Ball Game Last Evening—

First Team Will Play Beloit College Tonight.

Last night at Brodhead the second basketball team of the Janesville high school was defeated by the narrow margin of 18 to 16. The game ended in a tie but under the rules it had to be played off and Janesville lost. The floor had been used for dancing and was very slippery and this proved advantageous to the Brodhead players who played a slower game. The first team goes to the line city tonight to play the Beloit college team. Beloit defeated Milton and Milton defeated Janesville, so that according to the dope sheet the locals should lose this evening. The players, however, are not figuring results that way.

HIGH SCHOOL ORCHESTRA

SPENDS PLEASANT EVENING

Entertained at the Home of Mrs. Hyde—Excellent Musical Program Rendered.

On Thursday evening the members of the newly organized high school orchestra were very pleasantly entertained at the home of their director, Mrs. Hyde, No. 2, Cullen flats. The evening was passed in games and various amusements after which a delicious three course luncheon was heartily served. Later in the evening a very agreeable surprise was perpetrated on the entire company. It was a musicale which had been carefully planned and diligently practiced for by three members. Several very complicated selections were rendered by Messrs. Will Poenichen, violin; Lester Strang, clarinet, and Miss Mary McGinley, guitar. After the entertainment the young people reluctantly took their leave and thanked Mrs. Hyde and those who had entertained for a long-to-be remembered jolly good time. At the next business meeting the orchestra is to choose a new name. Several very appropriate suggestions have already been made.

WOULD REGULATE

THE AUTOMOBILE

Bill Introduced in the Legislature

Which May Affect the Janesville Autoists.

Senator Stoddard offered a new automobile bill in the senate yesterday morning, presenting what is believed to be the necessary and desirable restriction on horseless carriages, without any of the provisions that are so objectionable and obnoxious to reputable and careful drivers of these vehicles, which will interest Janesville autoists. The Stoddard bill fixes the speed limit at 25 miles an hour on country roads and eight miles an hour within city limits, also requiring the driver of any car to stop, stop or otherwise manage his machine so as to assist the drivers of frightened or skittish horses. A penalty of from $10 to $25 fine is provided for violation of any of these requirements. The bill also requires automobiles to display bright lights in the night time, under pain of a penalty of a fine of $50 to $100. The bill omits the extremely objectionable feature of requiring the cars to display numbers or the names of owners, in foot-high letters.

LEAF MARKET BUSY DESPITE WEATHER

Both Old and New Leaf Active—Another Season of Case Weather Is Needed.

Though the mercury in the thermometer has floated around the zero mark during the past week the market has shown more activity than formerly, both in the sales and purchases of old and new tobacco. All operations now are preparatory to the handling of the leaf, the 1904 crop now being received and the assorting rooms being prepared for the season's work. The dealers have been diligently gathering in the remnants of the old leaf and it will not be in the far distant future when it can be purchased at any reasonable price. There is danger that the warehouses might have to cease operations after the work of handling had been commenced on account of the lack of supply of the 1904 crop. Another season of case weather is needed to enable the farmers to take down that part of the crop which is still hanging.

The sales and shipments of old leaf in Janesville for the past week are: Fisher & Fisher sold 2000s of 1902-3 and bought 2000s of 1902-3; R. L. Erler disposed 400s of 1903 low grades; J. Soulmán purchased good sized lot of 1903, and L. B. Carle & Son obtained 5000s of 1901-2 and sold 3000s of the same years' goods. C. J. Jones bought 920s of 1901; A. N. Jones sold 4250s 1903 and purchased 500s 1903. The purchases of new leaf for the week gone by are: John Soulmán, 75,000 lbs.; F. S. Baines, 200a in Duin county, and A. N. Jones buys the following crops: John Cullen, 5 1/2a at 7 & 1c; Jos. Story, 3a at 7 & 1c; John Brown, 4a at 6 & 1c; Gusta Schmitt, 4 1/2a at 6 & 1c; W. J. Kennedy, 4a at 6 & 1c; J. White, 2 1/2a at 6 & 1c; D. Kelly, 1 1/2a at 7 & 1c; Walter Kelley, 2a at 7 & 1c; C. M. Craig, 2a at 6 & 1c; John Schmeling, 3a at 7 & 1c; J. W. Jones, 3a at 6 1/2c; Chas. Scherline, 3a at 6 & 1c; W. A. Douglas, 2a at 7 & 1c; H. Wolske, 2a at 5 1/2 & 1 1/2c; C. W. Jackson & Co., 3a at 7 & 1c; S. E. Craig, 4a at 7 1/2 & 1 1/2c; Aug. Schuchtschneider, 3a at 6 & 1c; H. Brenash, 3a at 8 & 1c.

Chas. John of London, England, representative of the Imperial Tobacco Co. of Great Britain, was in this city the latter part of the week. Nicholas Reed, Sr., delivered a crop of 1904 to local dealers Tuesday, for which he received $1425.

Three Lines Three Times, 25c

...Forty Years Ago...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Saturday, February 4, 1865.—The Grand Gift Concert.—It will not have escaped the attention of our readers that Prof. Balch, of Milwaukee, gives a grand concert in Milwaukee on the 23d of March, at which a large number of rich and valuable prizes are to be distributed. The gentlemen engaging with the professor in this work are reliable and substantial business men, who in the management of a similar entertainment for the past three years have made it a complete success. Doug. King, at the post office, is the agent for the sale of the tickets in this city and vicinity.

Lectures.—We see that John B. Gough is to lecture at Beloit, Rockford and Fond du Lac but have not learned that our "union" has made arrangements to have this eloquent orator appear before a Janesville audience. It was thought, after the success that attended the lecture of Miss Dickinson, that we should be treated to more of the same sort, but in this we have been disappointed up to date. Wake up, young gentlemen.

If the draft takes place in this city it will be the fault of two classes of men. First, the rich who are past age and are too stingy to give; and secondly, the class that pretend they are too poor. Men may be too penurious to give $25 to fill the quota, but no man in Janesville, we venture to assert, is too poor not to give something.

Rev. Mr. Hedge is in the city. The exercises at the Baptist church will be as advertised with the exception that another will preach in place of Mr. Smith.

If you want to see the quota of your ward filled without grafting, give the subject your personal attention, until it is accomplished. If you are asked to contribute funds, do so cheerfully and liberally and it will be done.

Promoted.—James Spencer formerly of this city has been commissioned as 2d lieutenant of Co. D, 16th Kansas cavalry regiment, stationed at Council Grove, Kansas.

The Bower City Band.—We understand that this band has applied at headquarters for the privilege of going into the service and making music for the Union.

FOOTLIGHT & FLASHES

Next Wednesday, Feb. 8, Hanlon Brothers will present to patrons of the Myers Grand the latest development of their ever popular pantomime "Superba." Each season this big spectacular entertainment is built anew and this year the Hanlons have spent over $20,000 in preparation. Not only has the book of the play been rewritten by a prominent Boston author, but in addition the plan of the pantomime has been materially altered and the show brought up-to-date. New dances by the Hanlons own ballet where the clown experiences new adventures. One scene in the Japanese village at the world's fair is bright and novel, and other similar scenes give pleasure. The beautiful transformations are always a feature of "Superba" and this year two of these are "The Battle of the Seasons," and "The Storks." The all-American ballet has typical special numbers which include "The Revels of the Poodles in Shadowland," the dance of the artists' models, the Dutch maidens, and the Parisians. Two big specialties

SCENE FROM "SUPERBA," WHICH APPEARS HERE WED., FEB. 8TH engaged in this country and rehearsed by Ballet Master Alvino, new specialties and vaudeville features, and a new scenic production filling two of the largest baggage cars are among the promises. In the new edition the comedy roles have been brightened and brought up-to-date. Pierrot continues chief funmaker, and is ably assisted by Hans, the comic Dutchman, and his sister Gretchen. Many of the scenes are laid in Superba's own land where romance is an everyday affair and where mystery is on all sides. Pierrot and the lovers visit the artists' quarter of Paris.

NEW COURT DISTRICT.

Senator Cullom's Bill Provides for Additional Bench in Illinois.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Illinois' judicial districts are to be reorganized by the bill introduced in the senate by Senator Cullom. The measure provides a new district and a new circuit judge for Chicago, reduces the size of the northern district, creates the new eastern district and provides for a judge, marshal and district attorney for that district. The new districts are to be formed as follows:

Northern—Counties of Lake, McHenry, Boone, Winnebago, Stephenson, Jo Daviess, Carroll, Whiteside, Lee, Ogle, DeKalb, La Salle, Grundy, Kendall, Kane, Du Page, Will and Cook. One of the district judges at Chicago will also hold court at Freeport.

Southern—Counties of Rock Island, Henry, Bureau, Mercer, Knox, Stark, Putnam, Marshall, Henderson, Warren, Peoria, Woodford, Livingston, McLean, Tazewell, Fulton, McDonough, Hancock, De Witt, Logan, Macon, Schuyler, Adams, Brown, Cass, Menard, Sangamon, Macoupin, Greene, Calhoun, Jersey and Madison. The circuit and district courts for the southern district will hold sessions at Peoria in addition to places where sessions are now held.

Eastern—Counties of Kankakee, DeKalb, Vermilion, Champaign, Platt, Moultrie, Douglas, Edgar, Shelby, Coles, Clark, Cumberland, Edgar, Hamilton, Fayette, Bond, Marion, Clay, Jasper, Crawford, Lawrence, Richland, Clinton, St. Clair, Washington, Jefferson, Wayne, Edwards, Wabash, White, Hamilton, Franklin, Perry, Randolph, Monroe, Gallatin, Saline, Williamson, Jackson, Hardin, Pope, Johnson, Union, Alexander, Pulaski and Massac. The district court for the eastern district will hold sessions at Danville, Cairo and East St. Louis.

This bill has been agreed upon by the two Illinois senators and Speaker Cannon, and they expect to pass it at this session. Judge Kohlman of Chicago will be transferred from the district to the new circuit court, and District Attorney Betha, upon the recommendation of Senator Cullom, will be appointed district judge. Senator Hopkins will name the other district judge at Chicago, but has not announced his candidate. He says his selection will receive the unqualified endorsement of the Chicago bar and be acceptable to the people of that city. Speaker Cannon will name the Judge for the new eastern district and is understood to have selected Benton Booth of Marshall county for that place.

Invitation to College Boys.

Washington, Feb. 4.—The inaugural committee is making arrangements to have a great throng of students at the inauguration of President Roosevelt. At least 5,000 of the young college men of the country are expected to attend. A spontaneous participation by the students in the great national event is looked for, and it is especially desired that the Western states should make a distinct showing in this section of the parade. College organizations will find it an easy matter to arrange accommodations. A special committee has charge of this department. At its head is Robert H. McNeill, and any communications addressed to him on the subject at the New Willard hotel will be answered promptly. The welcome that Washington will give the college boys will be strenuous.

Judge Swayne Replies.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Through his counsel, Judge Swayne Friday made formal response in the senate to the articles of impeachment made by the house of representatives. In every case the fact charged was admitted, but explained from Judge Swayne's point of view, and in addition it was contended that even if the conditions were true as charged they were not of a character to justify proceedings for impeachment for "high crimes and misdemeanors." The answer was read by ex-Senator Thurston, and when he concluded the senate issued an order requiring the house to file its formal reply by next Monday, and directed that all pleadings shall be in by Feb. 9, so that the trial may proceed Feb. 10.

A LAWYER'S LETTER.

Mr. E. D. McVey of Lowell, Mass., one of the best known lawyers in Middlesex County says: "I have written a good many letters, but none more willingly than this one to express my gratitude for the benefit my family derived from Father John's Medicine. It saved my son from a serious attack of pneumonia, and my doctor advised me to keep it on hand all the time, as a protection against colds and throat and lung troubles. He said to take it from time to time to build up the system, and that if taken after exposure it would prevent colds." This old prescription nourishes the body and makes strength because its ingredients are pure and wholesome and food for the blood and nerves. The absence of temporary and weakening stimulants and drugs explains why it builds up the body at the same time it cures the disease.

Father John's Medicine prevents pneumonia and consumption and cures all throat and lung troubles. No alcohol or poisonous drugs. Cures colds or money back.

Partly cloudy tonight; Sunday snow flurries; warmer.

A woman ceases to read store advertisements when she ceases to make purchases at stores—not until then.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

A little bright eyed flaxen haired was on the operating table in the hospital and a skillful surgeon, with delicate touch and deft fingers, worked over her for an hour, removing dead tissue and decayed bone which threatened the child's life. The operation was successful and convalescence speedily followed.

When she was able to sit up her mother said to her one day, "My pet, you are not the only sufferer from this disease, Viola Allen, the actress, was in a New York hospital and was operated on for the same trouble the day of your operation." The little girl said,

"When I get better I'm going to write her and send her my love and ask her how she got along," and she did. In due time an answer came from Miss Allen. It was full of love and sympathy for the child, for common suffering had made their hearts akin.

Two old Grand Army veterans met by chance at a country railway junction, where they were obliged to spend an hour. The button, on the lapel of the coat, served as an introduction and soon they were chatting as intimately as brothers.

One of them had served in an eastern regiment, while the other was from the west, but both were in the battle of the wilderness and they had much to discuss in common. Old scenes were lived over, and after the lapse of 40 years there was crowded into an hour the history of an era that was full of tragedy.

These men were nothing to each other except that they were bound together by the great brotherhood of comradeship, and as the ranks are rapidly being depleted, they realized that every survivor was a landmark. The loyalty of the Grand Army has long been an object lesson which speaks of devotion tested by common suffering.

An old man on the verge of 90, said the other day in answer to a question concerning his health, "Oh, I am well enough, but I am old and it is time for me to drop out and make room for other people. My wife is old and feeble and we are about all that is left of the old time associates of 40 years ago."

Yes, they were old people. For more than 60 years they had trudged along the pathway of life together, until the old promise, "these twain shall be made one flesh," had long since been verified. They thought alike, they acted alike, they looked alike, for they had lived and sacrificed for each other until it had become second nature.

The children had come and gone and the twilight of life found them where they started, so long ago, dependent upon each other for companionship. These old people, who retain their mental faculties long after the step is faltering, and vitality reduced, are as beautiful as rare and there is no demand for the room they occupy.

A mother knelt at a couch and bent over the form of the baby whose life had just gone out. It was the first baby and the prattle of innocent babyhood had filled the house with music.

The loss was too great to recognize as the first hush of silence filled the room, yet the mother realized that the child had gone never to return, and a great wave of sorrow engulfed her.

The door opened quietly and another woman entered. Kneeling by her side and placing an arm about her she said:

"I can say anything to comfort you, but I want you to know that I have passed through the same bitter experience, and I know how to sympathize with you."

That was all, but it spoke of a bond made sacred by suffering, and the two hearts blended in common grief. Then the neighbor said: "Your baby and mine are safe and we will see them by and by. The keen edge of sorrow will become a hallowed memory."

Two men from the same town met in a strange city. They had but little to do with each other at home, in fact were hardly on speaking terms, but a glance of recognition was followed by a warm clasp of hands and a cordial greeting. One of them said: "I was just thinking that the sight of a yellow dog from home would be cheerful, but I had no idea of meeting anyone that I knew," and they walked off arm in arm like old time friends. It was just a little touch of mutual loneliness which brought these two men together, and they became better acquainted in an hour than they had been as neighbors for years.

Thus it is in all the changing vicissitudes of human life. The brotherhood of man lies just below the surface and all that is required to establish the relationship is a word of friendly greeting or a touch of human sympathy.

That young man on the street corner on a Sunday morning, undecided as to how to invest his time is waiting for a cordial "good morning" and is ready to respond to an invitation to a place of worship.

The letter of condolence, the bunch of roses, in the house of mourning, frequently mean more than words, because they express in a delicate way the sympathy so much needed.

There will be less misunderstanding between capital and labor, and less trouble between employer and employee, when men come to know each other better. The span of human life is too brief for contention, and the outcome too uncertain for speculation.

The journey is very much alike to all participants. Commenced in helplessness, prosecuted with vigor as development advances, and dropping off into quiet when the age limit is reached.

It was said of a man who died a while ago: "The town will never miss him, and outside of the family circle no one will ever know that he has gone."

That is a sad comment on a life, and yet too true of many. It is worth something to live but it is worth more to help some one to a better life.

The letter of the little girl in the hospital, to Viola Allen came as a pleasant reminder to the lady that she was not the only sufferer, and the bond of sympathy expressed vibrates in every human heart. When the chords are touched by delicate fingers they respond in music which cheers the heart.

The wife in the home for 40 years is the same wife that was won by the sweet story of love so long ago. She has waited in vain for many years to hear the story repeated. Why?

The governor believes in a primary law for the people with a reservation. The people are not competent to elect a railway commission and so he proposes to appoint them if his hand-made legislature will so instruct. Bless the dear people. How fortunate they are in having a guardian.

The city marshal has the satisfaction of knowing that at least one organization is behind him in any effort which he may make to enforce the law. The Men's League of the Central M. E. church so expressed themselves recently.

There is a possibility that Ex-Superintendent Harvey may be a candidate for state superintendent. His many friends would be pleased to support him.

The railway companies propose to settle the question of back taxes in the courts where they will stand some chance so far as common justice is concerned. A wise decision.

It is fortunate for the country that there is a conservative senate back of a radical house.

If the railroads can be compelled to pay all the taxes life in Wisconsin will be a continuous holiday.

Civil service reform will be a good thing to perpetuate political game wardens "and such."

PRESS COMMENT.

La Crosse Chronicle: Our advice to Russia is to wash up, take a shave, go home and let Japan alone.

Madison Journal: If a man is no good for anything else, he might be cremated and his ashes scattered on the ice for the benefit of those who walk.

Milwaukee Sentinel: A Chicago man named Damm wants the legislature to change his name. Sounds too common in that town probably.

Jewel City, Kan., Republican:—The yourself to a post some day and let your horse go in and warm and loaf around for two hours. Then come to this office and tell us how you like it.

Sheboygan Journal: George M. Groh says he has no time for "political Tom cat alley howling." It is pretty early in the campaign to be throwing bookends.

Chicago Record-Herald: Dewie is spending the winter in Bermuda, and the Dewies are working away up in Zion, with telephones on their whiskers. It's quite a system.

Milwaukee News: William J. Bryn called at the White House Saturday and obtained a renewal of Mr. Roosevelt's subscription to the Commoner. Mr. Roosevelt says he couldn't get along without it.

Cincinnati Enquirer: A foreign chap who is going about this country playing the fiddle spells his name Ysaye, and his manager says it should be pronounced EE-sah-eeh.

Let's call him BHI.

Oshkosh Northwestern: The gist of the message which the czar gave to the delegation of workmen invited to meet him at Tsarskoe Selo seems to have been simply, "Go back to work and be glad that I am willing to forgive you so easily."

Racine Times: A hen with a gold nugget valued at $2.50 in her crop was killed at Deaswood the other day. Prospector rarely reap the benefit of their efforts. This chicken was from Nebraska and it may be years before the claim of the deceased is located.

Oshkosh Northwestern: Mr. Carnegie has given away about $40,000,000 to aid libraries in this country, but his generosity in this direction has not attracted half so much attention as that million dollar note which he did not give Mrs. Chadwick.

Evansville Review: A Kansas mother read that it is not right to be continually yelling "don't" at your children. She let her little boy alone for half an hour and in that time he broke the railing of the front porch, fell and tore his pants almost out, cut his shoes with a jackknife, contracted a stone bruise and fell into a tub of hot water.

Green Bay Gazette: The usually accurate Evening Wisconsin should be more careful in its orthography when using technical words. It refers to lawn as a "skeesuks" when all well posted persons are aware of the fact that the word is spelled "skeedicks," although Webster declines to be committed on this important question.

Racine Journal: The age limit is not entered in our universities. When Dr. Agell who has served thirty-four years as president of the University of Wisconsin wanted to resign the other day, it was turned down. The good doctor is now seventy-six years old. No age limit there in politics either.

Pond du Lac Reporter: Miss Pola A. Foliole gives notice that she will not quit her stage because her father has been elected to the senate. Therein she shows a devotion to her chosen profession that is worthy of commendation. Possibly she may think that as the daughter of a United States senator she will receive more attention than as the daughter of a mere governor. She has thus far won many laurels by her conscientious work on the stage and Wisconsin people will be pleased if she adds to them in the future.

Chicago Inter Ocean: The interstate commerce commission recommends the prosecution of the Santa Fe railway for granting rebates in "barreled disregard of the law." It says nothing about the Hon. Paul Morton, whose authority was supreme in the traffic department of the Santa Fe at the time the law was violated. (Thus the Washington plan of disposing of the rebate scandals is carried out according to program.) The interstate commerce commission has disclosed its findings that the law was violated, declares that the Santa Fe company should be prosecuted, and at the same time does not "back the cabinet." On the same day that the commerce commission recommends the prosecution of the Santa Fe, Mr. Morton is discovered in New York conferring with leading railway managers about the correction of railway abuses.

Superior Telegram: The other day a man was on trial in Chicago for swearing over the telephone at a telephone girl who responded when he called on central. The line he wanted was busy and he indulged in profanity. Incidentally during the trial the central girls who were called as witnesses testified that among the patrons who became profane when prompt service could not be rendered the ladies of the aristocratic Kenwood district were more profuse and emphatic in the use of glowing swear words than any other class of customers. The evidence does not seem credible, but it is apparent that if the telephone girls were trying to get even with the proud dames of Kenwood they knew how to grasp their opportunity. Miss Nellie McNamara, the complaining witness before the court, said: "I must say, however, that the men of Chicago are the politest of gentlemen when compared with matrons and debutantes when the ivy espaliered telephones on the wires happen to be busy."

Milwaukee Journal: And now they even teach sweeping and dusting and dishwashing by mail! These correspondence schools are many and they cover many fields. The famous colleges with ivy cloaked walls and attic atmosphere must look to their laurels! The rapid growth of correspondence schools—and their advertisements sprinkle the magazines—indicates an insatiable American yearning after "culture" and fees. Mail schools of physical culture may be passing with the fad, but an increasing host remains—law taught by mail, journalism, illustrating, stenography, bookkeeping, advertising, poultry keeping, agriculture, ginseng culture, etiquette, real estate business, how to pass civil service examinations—world without end. The only prerequisite is that you remit $25 for the first twenty-five lessons. The probabilities are that, with institutions, the course-by-mail is a single book (the pages sold on the installment plan), and that the same instruction could be obtained by the study of a better book costing $2 to $3. A letter written any successful man in the line that appeals would likely obtain the name, price and publisher of the book needed. But most of us perversive human beings need a prod. A few correspondence schools will supply the sharp stick after the fee is paid. Besides, a course by mail keeps one at home for a few days. So the correspondence course is a better investment than an Encyclopedia Britannica, antiquated edition, sold on the installment plan at double the cost at any established book store.

The Jiu Jitsu's Undoing

PHILEAS BROWN secured by mail a jiu jitsu course. He learned the way to use his strength with suddenness and force. And how to swiftly call in play each muscular resource.

He learned to twist his hand and wrist. And knock you down without so much as doubling up his fist.

When he was letter perfect in the art Phileas Brown became the bête champion and terror of the town.

Before you knew that he had moved he had the falling blow.

When his quick jerk got in his work you thought you'd been where dynamite and other dangers lurk.

He took big Henry Billiger, who weighed three hundred pounds. And slammed him here and there with ease across the baseball grounds, and Henry's raps of wonder were the only raps of sound.

With a voice: No one would speak of physical perfection—we were mighty mild and meek.

One day while Brown of brawn and brain in boastful accents talked Joe Smithers sauntered up and said his old roan mule had balked.

Phileas launched his shoulders, and toward that mule he walked. "Though slight and slim, his look was grim. And we in expectation hastened out and followed him.

Phileas Brown removed his coat, complacent, calm and cool. And boldly seized the pendant tail of Joseph Smithers' mule. Unheeding Joe's remark that he was acting like a fool.

A snarl, a buzz. That's all there was. Except an interrupted "Here's what jiu jitsu does!"

Phileas Brown is out again. He hobbles with a crutch. And wraps himself with bandages—he's still too sore to touch. He hasn't yet explained the case—he isn't talking much.

Some of us thought That it was not. The mule had learned a trick or two Phileas hadn't got.

Reason For Laughter. When the young mistress of the house entered the kitchen she carried herself with great dignity. She had come to call the cook to account.

"Mary," she said, "I must insist that you keep better hours and that you have less company in the kitchen at night. Last night I was kept awake because of the uproarious laughter of one of your women friends."

"Yes, mum, I know," Mary replied cheerfully, "but she couldn't help it. I was telling her how you tried to make cake yesterday morning!"—Birmingham (England) Post.

"No," said Dawson. "It would be suggestive to him."

"Nonsense! Nobody could possibly consider that story suggestive."

"He could. He'd consider it suggestive of some old chestnut which he'd insist upon telling!"—Catholic Standard and Times.

New Year Opened Yesterday, and Hong Lee and Lee Sing Establishments Celebrated.

Yesterday was the thirty-first anniversary of the succession of the Emperor Kwang Su, beginning the Chinese New Year celebration which lasts two weeks. The Jansville celestials confined their celebration to the afternoon and evening. Sweetmeats and cigars, the curious Chinese nuts and lilies were in evidence at the laundry of Lee Sing & Co. at 118 West Milwaukee street where Lee Sing, Moy Art, and Moy Pong abide; and at Hong Lee's establishment at 66 South River street where Hong and Charlie Lee put the glory finish on fine linen. "Fun, fun, holiday," said Charlie when questioned regarding the celebration. "Chinese cigars," he continued with a smile as he pressed out a well-known local brand to customers. Last year several of the little colony went to Chicago to participate in the celebration there but this year the festivities at home were sufficient for all.

In municipal court this morning he pleaded not guilty. His hearing was set for next Monday morning and his bail fixed at $50. No one appearing to sign his bonds, the young man was taken to the county jail.

HARVARD HIGH TO

Friday evening, Feb. 17, is the date of the "Junior Prom" at Madison and several of the Jansville young people are looking forward to the event with great anticipation.

The individual "bids" to this affair are often given six months before it takes place. Out at the inland lake watering places during the summer months they can sometimes be picked like berries. At other times, however, the young collegians are wary and may be cultivated ever so assiduously, without profit. There were a few instances during the past summer where Jansville girls captured as many as three invitations to the annual society events of as many colleges, just by being nice to the boys and throwing out no hints of ulterior motives. Perhaps there were no such motives, anyway, and the "bids," when they came, were real, eighteen-carat surprises.

Rev. J. T. Henderson left last evening for Pipestone, Minnesota, to visit with the parishioners of his former charge until Tuesday when he will officiate at the wedding of John Grey and Miss Pave Patten. It is the wedding that calls him to his old home at this time and a chain of rather unusual circumstances is connected therewith. The family of the bride-to-be are very good friends of the Jansville pastor and upon leaving that city Mr. Patten told Rev. Henderson that if his daughter should ever marry he was going to send for him to perform the ceremony, no matter what part of the world might be claiming him at that future time.

Two years ago Miss Patten visited in the Bower city over Sunday and before departing joined the church. Rev. Henderson expects to be gone a week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Blakely entertained a company of friends at their home on Glen street last evening. An elaborate supper was served, after which the guests were entertained with progressive elch. Mrs. F. J. Myhr and John Boyce captured the first prizes and the consolation trophies were awarded Mrs. E. E. Wilherrell and Albert Schnell.

Mrs. Frank Slavson was hostess at a seven o'clock dinner given at her home on Clark street yesterday. Following the dinner the guests were entertained at cards and dancing until a late hour.

Mr. and Mrs. James F. Sweeney are in Milwaukee.

Mrs. N. L. Carle entertained the Ladies' Afternoon Whist club this afternoon.

Miss Emma J. Paulson left yesterday for Chicago.

Mrs. J. P. Baker will entertain a few friends at cards this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Smith entertained at cards last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Murphy of Chicago are visiting in the city.

FELLOWS.
Fellows, Feb. 3.—Mr. Keylock entertained wood sawyers yesterday.

Mrs. Fred Fellows and Mrs. Lou Fellows are entertaining dressmakers.

Harry Danks spent Tuesday and Wednesday of last week in Stoughton.

Mr. Holden delivered cattle to Evansville last week.

Work and Hope.

Every genius was an amateur at one time or another. Pled ahead with your work, having in it a divine faith, and sooner or later you must win out.

Nature's Compensation.

Small Harold, after sizing up the new baby, said: "Well, that kid hasn't got any hair to comb, but he's got an awful lot of face to be washed."

Will Not Publish Army Journal.

The plan of the British war office to publish an "army journal" has been abandoned. The official reason for the abandonment is that it would take "too much time."

British Paupers.

If the paupers in Great Britain were arranged in a procession, four abreast, it is computed that the procession would be nearly 100 miles in length.

THOMAS MULCAIRNS
WANTS NEW TRIAL

Arguments on Motion Were Heard in Circuit Court This Morning—Decision Saturday.

In circuit court this morning was argued the motion for a new trial made in behalf of Thomas Mulcairns by his attorney, O. A. Oestreich. W. A. Jackson, called upon by District Attorney Newhouse by reason of his having conducted the first trial and his familiarity therewith to assist in the prosecution of the second, made the argument for the state. The defense maintaining that certain instructions which Judge Dunwiddie was asked to give the jury were not given. One of these was to the effect that unless the jury was satisfied that the defendant Mulcairns knew that the evidence which he was alleged to have endeavored to procure or induce Rose Dulin to give was false or untrue, he should be acquitted. Again, if the defendant, when he made the alleged statement of facts, was merely trying to persuade the girl that they were true, even though they were false, he should be acquitted. Judge Dunwiddie will give his decision on the motion next Saturday morning at half-past ten o'clock, the delay being necessary owing to the fact that he goes to Jefferson Monday. Mulcairns has been released from the county jail on $2,000 bail.

THINKS THE BOUNTY IS ABSURDLY SMALL

Bert Morgan of Union, the Champion Crow-Hunter, Hopes Co. Board Will Offer Better Terms.

Bert Morgan, who holds the record of having bagged more crows in Rock county than any other competitor in the pastime, arrived in the city this morning with another string of twenty-five. Mr. Morgan says that these will be the last for some time as he has gone to work in a tobacco warehouse. Before next spring he says that he hopes the county board will raise the bounty, which he regards as absurdly small, considering the skill needed to kill the tough old birds.

SUNFLOWER PHILOSOPHY.

Nearly every man has some fool thing hitched to him.

If you can't get along with people keep away from them.

The man with a scheme is not looking out for your interest.

Don't expect people to be loyal to you. That's where we are all weak.

A man is in hard lines when you have to tell whom he married to identify him.

Because a man doesn't call you a liar, he doesn't believe all you are telling him.

Even though a man retires voluntarily it is awful hard for him to like the one who succeeds him.

There are still some old-fashioned people in the world who object to seeing their names in print, saying it looks like an advertisement.

So little faith does the world have in a man's religious convictions, that every man Christian Scientist is suspected of being one to escape doctor bills.

is very much like the blossoming of a flower. Its beauty and perfection depends entirely upon the care bestowed upon its parent. Expectant mothers should have the tenderest care. They should be spared all worry and anxiety. They should eat plenty of good nourishing food and take gentle exercises. This will go a long way toward preserving their health and their beauty as well as that of the little one to come. But to be absolutely sure of a short and painless labor they should use

Deer Plays in City Streets.

A large buck deer invaded Lee, Mass., the other day in broad daylight. As he ran along the streets half a dozen boys tried to stop him, and in doing so the deer leaped nimbly about in the most playful manner possible. The animal exhibited no fear whatever until a dog appeared and sent him off in a hasty retreat.

THE MINORITY

By FREDERICK TREVOR HILL

Author of "The Case and Exceptions," etc.

(Copyright, 1905, by Frederick A. Stokes & Co.)

It is his day had begun with more listlessness than he had ever known before. It was to finish with a burst of restless energy. Discouraging reports met him at the station without disturbing him. A serious breakdown had occurred in the machinery? It must be repaired. Proper facilities were lacking? They must be created. A coal-barge had broken from its moorings and drifted ashore? It must be warped off and secured again. With no sign of hurry, but with indomitable purpose he stood over gangs of men and directed their labors, deaf to objections, insistent, persistent, the embodiment of activity and personal effort. Now he was in the shops disposing the means at hand for the needs of the moment, inventing resources and devising expedients. Now he was on the docks superintending, encouraging, heedless of difficulties except when surmounting them. There was life and vigor in his every action, irresistible impulse in his every action, and his power of personal examination at last carried the day. From the superintendent to the office boy, the little army of John Kennard's Sons responded with enthusiasm, and the buildings fairly hummed with restless energy. Obstructions melted away, tangles unraveled, breaks pieced together, the impossible became practical, and the wheels were once more turning. Every man in the place felt the touch of a strong, guiding hand, relied on it, and from very confidence, accomplished what was aimed at. "The boss is in fine form," was the only comment in the workshops, but the phrase had an unconscious ring of pride in the man who did things and knew what he did them for.

John Kennard was in good form. Never had he been more sure of himself. The consciousness of his power was strong within him as it must be in every commanding force, and when he dropped his pen at the sound of the evening whistle there was no trace of the fussy, fretful man who had left Mamaronock that morning. The tinkling of his bell roused him from the reverie into which he had fallen at the close of his hard day's work, and as he answered it a man entered the room and walked to the desk. He was a tall, well-built, intelligent-looking fellow, wearing a black cutaway coat and blue overalls, and carrying a stiff derby hat in his hand. "Good-evening, Ben. Want to speak to me?"

"Yes, Mr. Kennard. I'd like to have a few words."

The man gazed at the floor, and then let his eyes wander about the room without meeting his employer's glance of inquiry.

"Go ahead."

"I'm foreman of the outside department now, and—"

"I know."

"What I want to say is, I'd like to have the teams shod hereafter at Cutler's."

"Why? Doesn't Bennett do good work?"

"Pretty good."

"Then why change?"

"Well, you see he's not—"

The speaker hesitated.

"He's not what?"

"Not union."

"What of it? I don't care."

"No, Mr. Kennard, but the men do."

"What men?"

"The hands—all of 'em."

"Nonsense, Ben. You've worked here long enough to know that Bennett was in these shops for ten years before I set him up in business for himself. He's your neighbor and a good worker. I see no reason for changing."

"Then I'd like to leave."

Kennard stared at the speaker in astonishment.

"What! you want to throw up your job simply because you can't have your own way? That's foolish. Go home and think it over, Ben."

"I don't want to think it over, Mr. Kennard. I want to go now. Can I have my money to-night?"

The man's manner was unmistakable, and his employer simply nodded.

"Yes," he answered coldly, "but remember this, Homans, I won't take you back."

"That's all right. I can get another job, I guess."

"Perhaps. But after some years in this place, Ben—and you know whether It's a good place or not—that's scarcely the way to speak to me. You owe it to yourself, if you don't owe it to me, to—"

"I guess I don't owe you anything. I've earned all I got, ain't I?"

Kennard pushed his bell.

"Mr. Barton," he said, as the superintendent answered the summons, "Ben Homans has thrown up his job. Promote Dorson to his place and take on this man to fill up."

He tore a leaf from his note-book as he spoke, and handed the superintendent the name of Miss Harlan's protégé.

CHAPTER XIV.

A cardboard clock with movable hands nailed to the door of room 8 indicated to all comers that Mr. Peter McMannis would return to No. 213 Water street at a certain hour. The truth of this legend was, however, always open to doubt, what with mischievous boys who turned the hands every time they passed the door, and the irregularity of the tenant for whom it vouched. But when by any chance it happened to testify truly, McMannis could, by turning the key in the door, utterly discredit it; and this he almost invariably did. Its functions were therefore largely ornamental, although the pencilled inscriptions scribbled across its patient face—of which "you lie" was the mildest—might be said to rob it of even that virtue.

The delegate-at-large had not forgotten his maiden effort with John Kennard's Sons. He had promised himself the firm should receive close attention, and McMannis never broke a promise made to himself. One of his earliest activities had therefore been in the factory on the Hudson, where he discovered a wide field, but one of little promise. The union labor was practically unorganized, and although many of the workers were union men, many were not. Indeed there was a regrettable apathy among the members about seeking recruits for their ranks, and a general disinterestedness in the cause. To remedy this was McMannis' object, and although he found several personalities which promised well for future leadership, most of the material was poor, and such response as he did receive was unenthusiastic. There was nothing in the factory itself upon which he could at present build. The wages were union scale or better; the management was strict, but the work steady, and if the profits were large the employees seemed to think they received a fair share. Had it not been that every man in the union was grieved to his mill, the new delegate would have postponed payment of his personal grudge, and turned his attention to more impressive material.

There was no mail awaiting Mr. McMannis' arrival at his office, but he had brought his newspaper, and sitting down at the small desk, he spread it out and began reading it leisurely. Under the heading, "Incorporations at Albany Yesterday," he noted a list of names in fine print. He started to read them and suddenly stopped with an exclamation of surprise.

"The Confederated Machine companies; authorized capital $20,000,000."

Machine companies? That was in Kennard's line. What did it mean?

Was John Kennard actually planning to sell out? What if a combination was forming? Something was afoot, and money might be made by working it properly. If he could get on the track of the facts, the opportunity of a lifetime lay before him. How could he learn what was going on? He must not guess, he must not prophesy prematurely or raise any false alarms. He must know what he was talking about when the time came to talk, and until then, what not to speak of. There was nothing more to be learned from the newspaper. He knew the paragraph by heart. If Kennard was about to sell out, who would be in the secret? His confidential clerks, of course. Not very promising allies for an outsider in a place like Kennard's Sons. If consolidation was the purpose of this incorporation, who would know of it? Josh Harlan, of course.

Mr. McMannis closed and locked his door, turned the clock-face to the oak, and hurrying to the nearest telephone pay-station, called up the office of the Milling Companies, where Mr. Harlan reigned as vice-president. Central was somewhat tardy in making the necessary connection, and McMannis grew impatient as he sat sweating in the stuffy little cabinet. Two or three times he put the receiver to his ear, and hearing nothing but the faint humming of the wires, swore into the tube for the benefit of the operator. Eliciting no reply, he rang the bell long and angrily, until at last he was rewarded by hearing Mr. Harlan's voice. As he had merely called up the Milling Companies and had not yet asked specifically for any one, McMannis was somewhat surprised to find his friend and patron already at the phone.

"Hello?" sang Mr. Harlan's voice, inquiringly.

McMannis opened his mouth to answer, but it remained open in astonishment as another voice answered—

"Is that you, Harlan? This is Trundell."

"Yes?"

"What's doing in Confederated Machine?"

"Nothing much. We're marking time."

"Um!"

There was a long pause, and McMannis stretched his ears, fearing he had been cut off, but at last the strange voice continued:

"I see you're incorporated."

"Yes."

"That's all you want to say?"

"Yes. Report progress to inquirers."

"Um. I don't see it."

"What?"

"The progress."

"Well, you will. Just remember this still-hunt was your idea."

"Yes, but this is a little too still. Hope you'll have something to tell me soon."

"Hope so, too. Good-by."

"Good-by."

McMannis hung up the receiver on the hook, paid a double charge without protest, and hastened toward the office of the Milling Companies. His present business with Mr. Harlan could not well be conducted by telephone.

The vice president of the Milling Companies was a somewhat inaccessible person, and the stranger within his gates seldom got any further. McMannis found his progress obstructed by brass railings, office boys, ante-rooms, private secretaries and every other protection that hedges the New York financier. By the time he had run the gauntlet of the sentries, written out his name and business on a printed form, cooled his heels in three waiting-rooms, and been cross-examined by the head office boy, a confidential clerk, and Mr. Harlan's private secretary, he was in no very affable mood; and the atmosphere of the sanctum sanctorum itself, when he did reach it, was not calculated to restore his geniality.

Mr. Harlan's reception of his visitor was frigidly polite, but entirely free from cordiality. Neither was his fund of information excessive. Had he heard any talk of a combination involving John Kennard's Sons? Mr. Harlan wondered if his visitor had, and answered evasively. Why did McMannis ask? Because he was interested in protecting the workmen there. Mr. Harlan smiled the quiet, irritating smile of which he was master, and gave other evidences of being frankly amused. It was easy to see Peter was new at his business, he observed, since he proposed wasting his time in trying to work against John Kennard, whom everybody knew gave his workmen all they wished and would give any agitator more than he wanted. It was somewhat comic, Mr. Harlan commented, to think of Peter McMannis posing as a champion of downtrodden labor, and his selection of Kennard's men as his wards completed the comedy.

The expression on McMannis' face, as his patron joked and ridiculed him, was sinister in the extreme. Almost any other man would have taken warning at once, but Joshua Harlan gave no heed until the delegate-at-large snapped out that it was evident somebody had his own reasons for wanting Kennard left alone.

To his utter surprise Mr. Harlan admitted it, accompanying the admission with a sneer which was at once a threat and a challenge. His change of manner was as complete as it was sudden. From amused contempt it passed to cool, commanding scorn, and from familiar jesting his tone turned to a domineering insistence. If the former had irritated McMannis, the latter had irritated McMannis, the latter roused every slumbering devil within him, until he fairly rocked with anger. It almost seemed as though Mr. Harlan was bent on enraging his visitor to the last possible degree.

Yes, he was interested in the Confederated Machine company, Mr. Harlan repeated, and it was just as well McMannis knew it. Why? So as not to run counter to his patron's plans. Suppose he didn't approve those plans. He must approve them. Must he? Certainly. How could he do otherwise, what would he dare do?

The visitor, bursting with anger, mentally put a price on each sneer and insinuation, and responded with a question asked with half-closed eyelids and an attitude, part crouch, part pringe. What was there in it for him?

The answer was a laugh, a low mocking laugh mingled with a note of astonishment and wrath.

There was another question to be asked, and the labor agitator shot an ugly glance at his companion as he put it. Was Mr. Harlan looking for trouble? What did the walking delegate mean? The question was repeated. Did Mr. Harlan want trouble? If not, he'd better talk plain and quick to the speaker. Mr. Harlan would talk both plainly and quickly. The man wasn't born who could blackmail him, and the last man in the world-soaked better attempt it was the rum-soaked individual who was polluting his office for the last time. It was well Peter McMannis should understand with whom he was dealing. Did he think to frighten or dictate to a man of Mr. Harlan's caliber? Cowards frightened nobody, and it required men of ability to dictate. Let him keep the company of those with whom bullying was effective and blackmail was easy. It was a waste of words to talk about gratitude or obligation. Those expressions were meant for the ears of gentlemen. He would talk a language which curs could understand, and this was the word that the honorable walking delegate had better carry away with him. The slightest interference with John Kennard's workmen or anything else which interested Mr. Harlan, would bring Mister Peter McMannis up with a round turn. Let him mark that well. Mr. Harlan did not propose to speak twice. The office door was open now. McMannis would do well to go before Mr. Harlan touched his bell.

Alone once more in his room, the vice president of the Milling Companies settled his cravat and gazed with untroubled satisfaction in the glass.

"Gad, if there isn't a storm up at Kennard's to-night, I don't know my man," he murmured to himself, as he smilingly pursed a pearl pin into place.

At the same moment in the outside office Peter McMannis was studying a bankers' and brokers' directory opened at the letter T. The name Trundell was in heavy type, and he quickly made a note of the address.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

EMPHATIC TALK

The Kind That Carries Conviction to Every Janesville Reader.

Conviction must follow such emphatic proof as is given here. The testimony of Janesville residents should satisfy the most skeptical. Here is a Janesville case. Read it and see if doubt can exist in the face of this evidence.

Mr. E. T. Fish, of 355 Ravine street, proprietor of the Fish Dray Line says:

"When I was twenty years of age I fell in love with a girl, and ever since that I have been a sufferer from a dull aching pain across the loins. It never laid me up but it was often painful and annoying. Of late years I have gone to a physician every six months and had myself thoroughly examined under the impression that there might be something wrong with my kidneys. The diagnosis always resulting in the physician claiming these organs were sound, but as the pains existed when I happened to notice in my Janesville papers that Doan's Kidney Pills were guaranteed to cure just such troubles I procured a box at the People's Drug store and took them. Doan's Kidney Pills are a good preparation. My back has not ached since I used them. I have heard others speak very complimentary of them and if I did not know their merit and required such a medicine I would consider it a favor if some one suggested their use to me. For this reason I endorse them."

WHITE SLAVE TRADE

NEFARIOUS BUSINESS GOVERNMENT SEEKS TO WIPE OUT.

"Padrone System" Under Which Small Italian and Greek Boys Are Bought and Sold Like Cattle, Is Rapidly Being Broken Up.

(Special Correspondence.)

The government is extending its mighty hand to throttle a nefarious business which has been thriving for some years past under the very noses of the authorities. It is an old industry, revived from time to time, and may be described as a system for utilizing the immigration service for the virtual enslavement of multitudes of white children of foreign parentage.

The scheme in question has long been known as the "padrone system," and, in simple terms, consists of an arrangement by which great numbers of little boys are purchased in Italy and Greece, and imported into this country to work as bootblacks, peddlers, newspaper vendors, beggars, or what not, under the taskmasters who take from them all of their earnings, giving them only in return a wretched subsistence, and often treating them cruelly. These children, after their arrival in the "land of the free," are bought and sold with just about as much regard for their feelings or wishes as if they were dogs or cats.

The price of a small boy in southern Italy or in Greece is from $25 to $50. Sometimes they may be obtained for as little as $10. Children are plentiful over there, and the poverty stricken parents are not unwilling to allow their young sons to go to America—a wonderful country, where, as they have heard, wages are phenomenally high and riches easily acquired. Passage on the steamship will be paid, and the cash received is so much bonus.

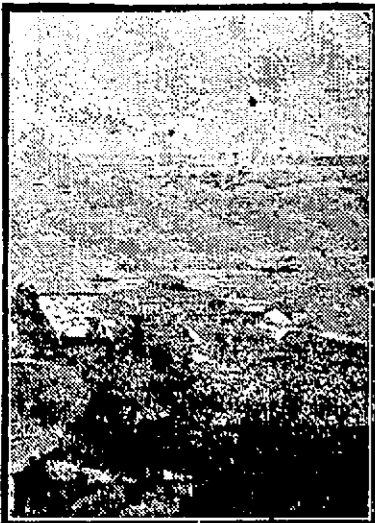

So the buyer collects a consignment of boys without much trouble. He prefers that they shall be not more than nine or ten years of age, for reasons which will presently appear. The shipment of them is the only difficulty, because they cannot be sent in a bunch, lest the suspicions of our immigration authorities be aroused. They have to be sent over by ones and twos, accompanying adults, to whom they usually claim relationship, and it is necessary to coach them carefully in the answers they are to give to questions which are sure to be asked when they reach Ellis Island. If they fail in giving the proper replies, they are liable to be sent back, and the speculator loses the money he has invested.

Buyers Make Trips Abroad.

The importer of these human chattels sometimes does his own buying, making visits once or twice a year to Italy, or Greece, for that purpose. But, however this part of the business may be managed, the system on this side of the water is always pretty much the same. The "padrone" (master), who owns the boys by right of purchase, either rents them out to minor bosses, at so much a head, or else puts them to work on his own account at peddling, blacking boots, or whatever employment may offer the best expectation of profit. In either case he pays them their wages—50 cents or $1 a week—and provides them with meals and lodgings.

As might be imagined, the board and accommodations furnished to the unfortunate little slaves are extremely wretched. The food they get barely suffices to keep body and soul together, and commonly they are obliged to sleep on the floor, 25 or 30 of them in a room. It is not surprising that their proprietors make money rapidly. Many of the Italian banks in New York, Chicago and other cities are owned by men who were formerly "padroni," and some of them are still in the business.

If it be asked why the boys do not run away from their masters, the answer is simply that most of them are so young as to need to be taken care of. Ignorant of our institutions and language, they do not feel able to look out for themselves amid the turmoil of a city. So long as they remain with the "padrone," they are sure, at all events, of food to eat and a home— heaven save the mark—to go to. If they took their affairs into their own hands they might starve; and, besides, their owner might catch them and beat them.

Nevertheless, when these slave children have reached the age of 14 or 15, they usually do run away and start in business of some kind for themselves. And this is precisely why the "padroni" prefer to purchase boys who are not over 9 or 10, and who may be counted on for at least three or four years of obedient service. Of course the supply has to be kept up by constant fresh importations, and some thousands of luckless youngsters have been delivered annually on this side of the water, destined for such servitude, for a long time past.

Where the System Thrives.

The "padrone system" thrives much more luxuriantly in certain inland cities, especially Chicago and Pittsburgh, than in New York. Dealers in the metropolis forward the boys to the West as fast as they arrive, and, on delivery at their destinations, they are sorted out and bought and sold like any other merchandise. In some cases the slave merchant, who does a western trade, resides in New York and disposes of the children, at so many dollars apiece, wherever they may be a demand for them. An Italian or Greek boy, of suitable age, is always a marketable article.

The industry, however, bids fair to lose much of its prosperity by reason of the stringent measures for its suppression, which have been adopted recently by the immigration bureau. Everything possible is being done to put a stop to it. Boys who arrive tagged for Pittsburgh or Chicago are especially under suspicion, and every Greek or Italian youngster who cannot give satisfactory proof that he has near relations in this country is promptly deported. This course of procedure on the part of the government is costing the "padroni" much money, and great is the groaning and gnashing of teeth thereat.

The department of commerce and labor does everything in its power to protect the immigrants. They number about 1,000,000 per annum, at the present rate of admission, and the children represent an important fraction of the whole number. Two hundred thousand of the aliens who landed on these shores during the fiscal year ended June 30 were under 14 years of age. Sixty-five thousand were under 6 years, and 15,000 were under 3 years. The babies in arms alone were a multitude. Particularly for the benefit of these last the immigration bureau has newly built a roof garden at Ellis Island, where the infants and their mothers are allowed to enjoy the cool breezes of New York bay, while waiting for permission to become Americans.

Squashed Street Car Hog.

"Yes," said the trolley car conductor, meditatively, "we see many queer sights in our travels about town. There is no phase of human life that does not manifest itself on our cars. Your query makes me think of an incident that happened lately. The car was crowded with late shoppers, all carrying bundles. Most of the passengers were women, yet all the men, but one, were seated. That one was a burly fellow standing crosswise of the car, with elbows out, reading a paper. On both sides of him were women, who were much disturbed over his position. His right elbow was jammed hard against one woman's shoulder, and when the car lurched it hurt her. Finally, grabbing the fellow by both arms, she swung him around straight with the remark: 'There! If you'll turn this way you will have more room and every one else, too!' Now that's what I call spunk."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Memory Method.

Association is the vital spring of memory, and anyone who analyzes his thought process may catch himself recalling a thing by a series of allied things. Many people have tried to systematize association and arrange a scientific memory method.

A mathematician has discovered a most interesting process for remembering dates. Suppose you have forgotten the year of the Norman conquest. Take the date of your birth and add to it the number of the month when you were born. Multiply the result by the day of the month your father was born. Square the result. Add six.

Now divide by the cube root of the number of people in the United States. Forget the result, add 1066, and you have the required date.—Youth's Companion.

Hope for the Father.

The young doctor met his old preceptor on the street and, confided he had a serious case about which he was worrying.

"The baby died a few minutes after it was born," he remarked, "and I fear the mother will die before morning."

"Don't take it so hard," said the old physician, as he gathered up the reins. "Perhaps the father won't die."

Money in Raising Weeds.

To cultivate dandelions, burdock and couch grass seems like an absurdity to some, but we have it upon the authority of the department of agriculture that many tons of these roots are imported annually into this country for the drug trade.—Scientific American.
